The Cities Mission Journey Newsletter #11

A Word from the Coordinator

Thomas Osdoba

As increasingly seems the case, we are racing through time and well into 2025. With all of the European and global dynamics swirling around, I hope everyone is doing well. We are excited to share the latest on our continued progress with the EU Cities Mission.

First, we are looking forward to seeing you all in Vilnius, the 2025 EU Green Capital, for the Cities Mission Conference on 6-8 May. We will celebrate the achievements of Mission Cities and explore how to harness city successes to advance climate action for 2030. This conference will provide an invaluable opportunity to connect, learn, and share as we strengthen our collective efforts towards climate neutrality.

Achieving this goal is more urgent than ever, as Europe advances its new Clean Industrial Deal to accelerate decarbonisation while ensuring economic resilience. Cities remain at the heart of this transformation, driving the shift to clean technologies, fostering sustainable industries, and implementing ambitious policies. To succeed, they need stronger collaboration across sectors, innovative solutions, and supportive frameworks that help translate climate ambition into tangible progress. Discussions in Brussels and with our Cities Mission Mayors Advisory Group are making the case for aligning Europe's strategic imperatives with the leadership of its cities and metropolitan regions.

Building on the work with Mission Cities, NetZeroCities offers several peer-learning opportunities for ambitious cities across Europe and Horizon-associated countries. A key component of this approach is the Twinning Learning Programme, which recently selected its third cohort of Twin Cities to exchange knowledge, co-create solutions, and overcome shared challenges. A new call for Twin Cities will open in June, offering more cities the opportunity to join the largest peer-learning initiative under the EU Mission for Climate-Neutral and Smart Cities. Additionally, with tools like the Climate Transition Map, collaborative activities, and a dedicated helpdesk, the NetZeroCities Portal offers a space for all cities to access valuable resources on their climate neutrality journey.

Together, through partnerships, collaboration, and shared knowledge, we are advancing towards a sustainable and climate-resilient Europe. We look forward to seeing you in Vilnius and continuing this important journey together.

Thomas Osdoba
NetZeroCities Coordinator

Highlights

Cities Mission Conference 2025: Celebrating Progress, Driving Further Action

The Cities Mission Conference is heading to Vilnius, Lithuania, from 6 to 8 May 2025. This year's theme "Harnessing City Successes: Advancing Climate Action for 2030" celebrates the concrete progress Mission Cities are making toward climate goals.

Organised by the European Commission and the Mission Platform, the event will bring together city leaders, changemakers and experts to share achievements, spark new ideas, and keep the momentum going toward climate neutral cities.

More About the Conference >>

The EU Cities Mission's Peer-learning Network Keeps Growing, now 184 Cities Strong!

As of January 2025, 24 new cities have joined the Twinning Learning Programme, partnering with Pilot Cities to work together on climate solutions in areas like energy, buildings, mobility, and waste.

A new call for Twin Cities opens this June, giving more cities the chance to join the Mission's largest peer-learning initiative.

"The Mission is first and foremost about change that can benefit people now."

Hanna Gronkiewicz-Waltz, former Chair of the Cities Mission Board, looks back on five years of support to the EU's Climate-Neutral and Smart Cities Mission. She reflects on the Mission's successes so far, what still needs to be done, and how to truly connect with people, whether they are policy-makers or everyday citizens.

Be Inspired by Pilot Cities Leuven, Cluj-Napoca, Malmö and Oslo!

Take a deep dive into how Pilot Cities like Leuven, Cluj-Napoca, Malmö, and Oslo are testing transformative solutions in cooling, energy, mobility, and construction:

Leuven's Lighthouse Districts: Illuminating Pathways to Green Heat

Leuven, a Belgian city of around 100,000 inhabitants, is no stranger to groundbreaking ideas. In 2019, buildings in Leuven were responsible for 60% of all direct CO2 emissions within the city, coming primarily from fossil fuel-based heating systems. To decarbonise building heating, the city administration is embracing innovative approaches.

Building a Greener Cluj-Napoca Through a Citizen-centric Climate Strategy

Citizen engagement is key in driving successful climate transitions. In Romania, the city of Cluj-Napoca has tested and implemented ways to involve citizens in building a net-zero city together. As a participant in the Pilot Cities Programme, Cluj is encouraging collaboration, citizen engagement, and innovative strategies to create a sustainable future.

More on Citizen-centric Climate Strategies >>

Malmö's Bold Path to Climate Neutrality: A Model for Systemic Change

Malmö is taking bold steps towards climate neutrality by 2030 and doing it systemically. As part of the Pilot Cities Programme, the Swedish city is tackling emissions across seven key areas: from heating and mobility to circular economy and climate-smart consumption. Backed by strong partnerships, local roadmaps, and initiatives like carbon capture and Climate Talks webinars, Malmö is embedding climate action into everyday governance, infrastructure and community life.

Explore Malmö's Approach >>

Oslo's Practical Guidelines for Zero-emission Construction Sites

Oslo now requires all municipal construction and infrastructure projects to be 100% emission-free! To help achieve this ambitious goal, the city has produced guidelines to support the industry, leveraging their Pilot activity 'PURE: Power Up a REnewable Society'. The guidelines will support the construction sector with its energy transition while complementing existing contractor procedures.

Snapshot from Cities

Espoo, Finland

Mission Cities from across Finland gathered in Espoo for a policy innovation workshop focused on urban transport and mobility. They explored how to shift mobility habits and reduce car dependency, manage heavy traffic and logistics, and make better use of urban space. The workshop marks a step forward in strengthening collaboration on sustainable mobility across Finnish cities.

Marseille, France

AtmoSud and the city of Marseille, with the support of NetZeroCities, awarded 6 "Pioneers of Climate 2030" trophies to Marseille-based businesses, recognising their exemplary climate actions. The awards were presented during the Climate Chance Europe-Africa 2025 Summit.

Munich, Germany

Mission City Munich recently submitted its Climate City Contract with its plans to reach climate neutrality. The Climate City Contract includes commitments, action plans, and investment strategies, and serves as both a roadmap and a living document for cities' transformation processes.

Trondheim, Norway

Trondheim hosted a policy lab focusing on innovation, together with fellow Mission City representatives from Bucharest. The visit included inspiring exchanges on turning waste into resources, along with site visits to Vitensenteret i Trondheim and NTNU Vitenskapsmuseet, showcasing how both education and knowledge-sharing can support the green transition.

Utrecht, the Netherlands

As part of its work on the Climate City Contract, Utrecht hosted Patrick Child, Deputy Director General for Environment at the European Commission and Mission Manager of the EU Cities Mission. The visit focused on innovative energy and climate solutions, including challenges like grid congestion. Local universities shared forward-thinking projects, showing how strong regional partnerships can drive real progress.

City Transformation Takes Centre Stage in Berlin

In January, 48 cities gathered in Berlin for the Enabling City Transformation Boot Camp, an intensive two-day event focused on scaling up climate action. Facilitated by NetZeroCities, the sessions offered space for deep collaboration, practical planning, and peer learning.
